WELCOME TO THE LATEST NEWS FROM EREVENA

We have been waiting some time for the inevitable correction in public and private markets, and it's finally here. These are challenging times for many founders and investors, especially those who haven't experienced this multiple times before.

There are lots of good things about times like these, and it remains a great time to invest in the future. Many of our clients are building robust, category defining companies, backed by experienced value add investors. These companies will continue to thrive, and investors will be able to find value again. The Exec talent market is a little more fluid and these things will help smart founders and CEO's build great businesses.

The last quarter has been an exceptional one for the company, as you will see below we have delivered some amazing work for some amazing clients. Congratulations to all involved, especially our teams who have worked so hard to deliver these outcomes.

Next week we will get almost the entire company together for the first time in a few years. I couldn't be more excited to see everyone in person!

We would very much appreciate you taking a few minutes to fill in the survey. The corresponding in-depth analysis and report will be released to all responders in September.
